Headquartered in South Jersey, the new branch will make life easier for its northern clients and employees.

July 20, 2011

Parsippany's business community grows with the addition of a northern New Jersey office for Continuum Health Alliance. The health care management firm has established its newest branch at 160 Littleton Rd.

The 13-year-old company is in business to optimize medical business operations and help doctors and hospitals better serve their patients. Until now, CHA's clients had to travel to Marlton in southern New Jersey to receive training and technical support.

"We recognize the challenge and added travel costs for our clients in North Jersey having to travel to our office in South Jersey for training and other support services," Dr. John M. Tedeschi, CHA's CEO and founder, said in a statement. "We're pleased that now they will have access to these services in a more convenient location."

The Parsippany Area Chamber of Commerce rolled out the welcome mat for CHA'S new regional office. Chamber President Robert J. Peluso said the company will find a great new home in Parsippany-Troy Hills.

"Our community provides easy access to major highways and offers a talented work force to support their endeavors," Peluso said. "Continuum Health Alliance, along with its employees, will benefit from being part of our community."

CHA employs more than 1,600 employees in approximately 80 medical offices and hospital settings. More information on the company is available at its website.
